Indonesia's commission for environmental protection said on Sunday it would halt the operation of a palm oil plantation that had caused extensive land and water contamination in the area because it was its work site. The commission had ordered the closure of the plantation in Pos Darwiso in West Java province earlier this month following a government investigation into the cause of pollution in the area, which saw residents forced to use water from wells that were contaminated with oil and heavy metals. "We have also ordered the suspension of the operation of the plantation until the investigation into its cause of pollution is over," the commission's chief, Siti Amina, told AFP. "The plantation is one of the biggest polluters around. Its production is not yet over." The plantation was owned by PT Santika Tenaga Nasional, a large pulp and paper producer in West Java province that is one of the top producers of palm oil in Indonesia, according to official data. Indonesia is the world's third largest producer of palm oil. Critics have pointed to the plantation as a major source of pollution in the area, located in the area of Mambin, a town with a population of more than 50,000. In April this year, the local government issued a temporary closure order on the plantation. Environmentalists were concerned about the impact of a huge, private palm oil plantation that was then being operated by a large company, PT Santika. The order was for the plantation to stop and an investigation was launched into the possible sources of pollution 77a5ca646e

Process Controller

Process Controller is a simple, easy to use, freeware utility to keep track of your running processes and view all their details. Process Controller can be used as a help to manage the Windows operating system and its processes. Process Controller comes with a single window, the only one that is not modal. By default, the window is always in focus, unless you disable it with the help of the buttons on the left side of the window. Process Controller does not display the list of processes but instead shows a small bar chart, that represents the currently running processes in terms of CPU, memory, disk usage and network connection. You can easily access the individual information about each process by right-clicking it. The process can be closed by pressing the 'Close' button on the right side of the window. You can enable real-time monitoring for any process. When the process is active, a small bar chart will show a progress bar that represents how much of the CPU, disk space or network resources is currently used by that process. Process Controller has a friendly user interface and the information presented can be viewed in a very intuitive way. The processes can be sorted by any of the columns that are available. The information displayed is updated every second. The height of the bar chart can be changed. Process Controller is freeware. There are no ads, no time limits and no restrictions.
